Townhall.com. President Bush's Opening Pitch at Yankee Stadium After 9-11 [Video file]. YouTube. Web. 6 Nov. 2011.

More so than static pictures, this video conveys some of the images from the game itself that I wanted to get across. There are fans waving signs and chanting the exact words I have in my poem. When I was originally doing my paper, this served as a point of inspiration but also a concrete example of what I was arguing, so it has served me throughout the original, remediation and repurposing portions of this project.

911TruthVideos. All known footage of second plane impact [Video file]. YouTube. Web. 20 April 2014.

This video was meant to be a way of introducing the subject matter that this poem deals with, or really to set up where the poem was born — from these news broadcasts. It recaps the first moments after the crash and chaos, the sort of breakdown of this comfortable patriotism and set up a way for me to rebuild this patriotism through poem and images of the Yankee game.

911Archives. President Bush addresses Congress and the nation. YouTube. 2 Sept 2012. Web. 4 April 2012.

There is a paragraph in my original piece that argues that the kind of patriotism I am referring to in my piece is summed up in George W. Bush's post-9/11 speech, and it is that kind of patriotism that we can see in sports — there are winners and losers, good guys and bad guys. It is a short piece but a recognizable moment in American history.

NorthJersey. Witness to History: the photographers of 9/11 [Video file]. YouTube. 30 Aug 2011. Web. 12 April 2014.

This video clip goes through some of the most memorable images from 9/11 and provides some of the photographer's insight into those photos. While it captures the tragedy aspect, it also shows New Yorkers coming together and embodying patriotism in a time of crisis, and was helpful to me when coming up with image transitions.
